

Business Roundtable

U.S. Taxes are Out of Sync with World’s Leading Economies

America Proposes Increasing Already High Corporate Taxes as the Rest of World Moves in Opposite Direction

- The United Kingdom and Japan recently reformed their international tax systems to provide a permanent tax exemption for most foreign earnings of U.K. and Japanese companies. Now 25 of 30 OECD (Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development) countries employ a “territorial” tax system that does not tax the worldwide earnings of their global companies.

- For example, U.K. and Japanese companies pay taxes to Germany on their German earnings, but do not pay taxes on their German earnings to the United Kingdom or Japan.

- A U.S. company operating in Germany, on the other hand, pays taxes on its German earnings both to Germany and the United States.

- Only four OECD countries, in addition to the United States, tax the worldwide earnings of their global companies: Ireland, Korea, Mexico and Poland.

- Each of these countries, however, have significantly lower corporate tax rates than the U.S. – which has the second highest combined corporate tax rate in the world at 39.3 percent.

- Each of these countries – including the United States – currently allow their companies to defer paying tax on foreign earnings until those earnings are paid as a dividend to the parent company back in the home country.

OECD Countries with a Territorial Tax System	OECD Countries with a Worldwide Tax System
Australia	Ireland
Austria	Korea
Belgium	Mexico
Canada	Poland
Czech Republic	United States
Denmark
Finland
France
Germany
Greece
Hungary
Iceland
Italy
Japan
Luxembourg
Netherlands
New Zealand
Norway
Portugal
Slovak Republic
Spain
Sweden
Switzerland
Turkey
United Kingdom

- When a U.S. company competes globally, it is virtually certain to be competing with a company that is not taxed on its foreign earnings – creating a competitive disadvantage for the American company.
- The U.S. Treasury Department now proposes to fundamentally rewrite the basic rules of international taxation that have been in existence for nearly 100 years and impose a massive new $200 billion tax on U.S. companies operating in foreign markets.
- While most of the world is striving to make their companies more competitive, the United States is moving in the opposite direction.

A massive increase in taxes will disadvantage American companies and make U.S. workers less secure.